Big welcome for first residents in 'green jobs' - Page 2

Police warning to riders in woods

POLICE are carrying out patrols in a woodland beautyspot after complaints by visitors and local residents. Officers from the Shooters Hill Safer Neighbourhoods team have been patrolling Oxleas Woods after reports that youths have been riding motorbikes illegally. Greenwich police have received numerous complaints about youth driving carelessly since the start of the summer. During the patrols over recent weeks, officers have warned several youths about their behaviour and the nuisance they are causing to those who attend the woods for a day out. Some were driving without helmet, licence or insurance. Sergeant Barry Edge, from the Shooters Hill Safer Neighbourhood team told GT: "There are some serious concerns regarding the use of motorbikes. Clearly, some youths do not realise that it is illegal to drive through the woods. Families enjoy the woods and this is not the place where teenagers should be riding their motorbikes." He added: "I urge all parents of teenagers in possession of a motorbike to ensure that they are insured and riders are in possession of a licence. We have plans to confiscate and destroy all uninsured bikes driven illegally through the woods."

In my
back to business
as usual

IT'S my job to help small businesses, social enterprises and charities to raise money, and I managed to get hold of between £3 - 4 million a year for them.

The last year has been really hard – for them and for me. But things are beginning to look better for business borrowers. I recently spent a day out with a senior bank representative who was keen to understand more about the five host boroughs for the London 2012 Olympic Games. Naturally I was keen to get him to my home borough of Greenwich. The bank wanted to understand what sorts of businesses and what sorts of business ideas were being opened up by the 2012 games. The banks are keen to be involved in lending within the five Olympic boroughs and particularly to organisations who are creating products and services that will deliver on the 2012 games and the legacy promises that we made in our Olympic bid. They see the five boroughs as areas where investment will be channelled, change will occur and jobs will be created – and this means potential new business customers. Their other reason is the additional PR opportunities of being a lender to successful local businesses who are associated with the games – so they are clearly anticipating great things of Greenwich and our other four 2012 partners.

If your bank isn't keen on lending to you – there are a lot out there that are.

I'm glad to see that Greenwich is leading the way in helping local businesses by hosting a 'Beat the Squeeze' business support event at Charlton Athletic FC. I'll be running a workshop at the event on September 29 and we'll be talking about how you grow your business, raise finance and get hold of free and subsidised help in securing those funds. It's a chance to network with other business-owners and a wide range of support agencies and I urge local businesses to find out more by visiting www.greenwich.gov.uk/business/eventsbooking

Top names for library's Friends' Week

FILM and TV star Eileen Essell and award-winning historical novelist Lindsey Davis – both local residents – will be highlights of West Greenwich Library's 'Friends' Week'.

Eileen, who made screen debut at the age of 78, appeared in Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, The Producers and Torchwood while Lindsey created the hugely popular Ancient Roman 'detective' Marcus Didius Falco.

Eileen will be talking about her acting career, and Lindsey will be reading extracts from her novels and signing copies of her books.

The week runs from September 21-26 and is a joint initiative by the Friends of West Greenwich Library and library staff. During the week there will also be a Charlie and the Chocolate Factory-themed quiz and drawing competition for children, which Eileen will judge.

There will also be the chance to join in a book discussion or learn how to use the library computers, plus a guided tour of some of Greenwich's sites of literary interest.

All events are free and locals can put forward the improvements they would like to see when the refurbishment recently agreed by Greenwich

Council takes place in 2010.

Friends' chair Ann Grant told GT: 'The library is a vital community resource and we want to ensure that everybody gets the best use they can out of it.'

"All the events are free and take place or start at the library, and we hope to see as many people as possible."

Day to remember for residents
back in work

by Andrew Stern

THE first batch among 250 local unemployed people recruited by Greenwich Council have been welcomed back to work by deputy council leader Peter Brooks.

Cllr Brooks met them as they completed their week-long induction at the Greenwich Work and Learn Centre next to North Greenwich station.

It was the first tangible result of the council's campaign to help jobless people across the borough during the credit crunch.

Hundreds of residents applied for the 250 "Green jobs", forming great queues outside the Woolwich Public Hall last month and then at The Valley and Eltham Green.

The new recruits came from

As well as giving work to 250 people it's also helping the council in its battle against litter and fly-tipping all over the borough, from Greenwich to Blackheath and over to Woolwich and Plumstead, including targeted estates like Woolwich Common, The Oaks and Glyndon.

Cllr Brooks, who is also the council's cabinet member for regeneration and human resources, told GT: "It was great to meet the first team of recruits who are clearly very enthusiastic about having the chance to make a difference to their local environment - and be back in work."

"This scheme really is a 'win-win' for everyone. As well as giving much-needed work to 250 unemployed local people during a difficult recession, it's also adding extra resources in the council's battle against fly-tipping, litter and other environmental problems that local people quite rightly see as a concern."

The staff will work for up to 12 months, taking on roles that include environment workers with the council's Cleansweep service, supervisor posts and neighbourhood wardens.

They will work in teams, with some focusing on town centres, others on housing estates and further teams tackling litter in residential streets.

The new staff were recruited at a series of Open Days hosted by the Council and Greenwich Local Labour and Business (GLLaB) – the agency set up by Greenwich

Council and other agencies to support local people into work and training.

In all, 1,215 people attended the three open days, and all those eligible – 1,031 in total – were given job interviews on the spot.

The posts are being funded through the government's Working Neighbourhoods Fund.

Vote for the Observatory as London's top landmark

by Peter Cordwell

THEY'RE voting for London's top landmark - and we're calling on all GT readers to vote for the Royal Observatory and the Cutty Sark!

The initiative is being run by the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games (LOCOG) and the winners will be included in a celebratory set of London 2012 'Landmark London' pin badges.

You have until midnight on Sunday, October 18, to cast your vote at www.london2012.com/landmark

'Landmark London' is being run in partnership with London councils and supported by the 33 local authorities who have compiled a shortlist of the capital's best-loved landmarks.

Greenwich's nomination is the Royal Observatory, already recognised as a valuable iconic backdrop to the equestrian events to be held in Greenwich Park, and the fire-struck Cutty Sark.

Sebastian Coe, chair of the London 2012 Organising Committee, told GT: "Pin badges are a popular part of the heritage of the Olympic and Paralympic Movement with each organising committee producing a range of these collectors items that appeal to different people."

"Inviting Londoners to create the 'Landmark London' set is one of many ways people will be able to get involved in the London 2012 merchandise programme."

Greenwich Council leader Chris Roberts said: "This is a great idea and the perfect

ANYWHERE BETTER?: the Royal Observatory as seen by residents relaxing in Greenwich Park

Anne-some!

THE Princess Royal, who previously had reservations, has come down strongly in favour of the London 2012 equestrian events being held in Greenwich Park. In the current edition of 'Horse and Hounds', she said: "I am content that there will be no less room than in Aachen (home of the 2000 world equestrian games), and possibly slightly more. The legacy issue is being addressed, so I am now looking forward to a very well-run Olympic Games in London in 2012 in the best possible venue."

opportunity for all of us in Greenwich to demonstrate the great pride we have in the borough.

"We could have chosen two or three other landmarks that would have strongly represented the borough, but the Royal Observatory, with its global appeal, was an obvious choice with the great and emotional appeal of the Cutty Sark. I hope Greenwich residents in their thousands will vote for them."

Greenwich faces stiff opposition from Richmond-upon-Thames (Hampton Court Palace), Lambeth (London Eye), Ealing (Ealing Studios) and Hackney (Hackney Empire), while the City of Westminster has nominated Westminster Abbey, the Royal Albert Hall and Eros.

And no-one should under-estimate local rivals Bexley and Lewisham, who entries include Hall Place, Crossness Engines and Lewisham Clock Tower.

So get voting for the Royal Observatory and the Cutty Sark at www.london2012.com/landmark

It's swept every morning

I'M writing in response to the letter in GT called 'Getting stores to sort their rubbish' (GT, August 4). As a resident and employee in the borough, I find it hard to believe that you printed this article about B&Q without highlighting that you yourselves are responsible for the recycling bins in the car park. Also, to clear the rubbish that has been clearly fly-tipped you will need at times specialist clothing and training for health and safety reasons. If your reader checked they would find that B&Q have a man sweeping their car park nearly every morning. I feel that it was irresponsible of you to publish this letter without reiterating some of these points to your readers. Name supplied

● WE pride ourselves in printing letters covering all local viewpoints and offer a right of reply where appropriate. The previous letter writer was complaining about general waste blowing around the car park - not waste from the Council's recycling containers. But we are happy to print your letter pointing out another location where people can recycle. Yes, clearing fly tipping can be expensive - that's why the council works with local businesses to ensure they keep their private areas clean. The council can offer to do the work and charge them for it - but reserves the right to issue fines where warnings about the need for remedial action are not heeded.

Site is still bare

I RATHER think that the Ed is missing the point when he tells us what a wonderful library service the people of East Greenwich will get. At the moment there is no sign of this all-singing all-dancing library. The site is still bare. The people of East Greenwich would like to have a weatherproof library now, not just a dream of what might be in the future. I was actually in the library when it flooded, yet again, on August 6. Our group had just finished our meeting when we were awash with water spreading rapidly across the floor. I don't think anyone fully appreciates the position our library is in. Every time we have a downpour of rain, the library, in its present state, floods. That's why we're disgruntled when we read about this £1.3m being spent to start-up five nominated libraries.

Beryl Horsham, Greenwich
● £1.3M is available for new investment in five libraries across the borough, and this includes an amount to cover weatherproofing of the roof at East Greenwich Library, pending construction of the new building. Sorry we have not made this clear in previous stories which have focussed on the new investment. Ed.

THANKS, GT!

THANK you, Greenwich Time, for featuring my new company, My Green Cleaner, in your paper on August 11. As a result, I've now acquired no less than 14 new clients for my eco-friendly cleaning service and I'm able to take on two extra staff. Just amazing! Readers may be interested to know that my website is now up and running. It is www.mygreencleaner.co.uk

The Nolan insights

LOVE to read the match reports from Charlton each week in your paper. Kevin Nolan really hits the nail on the head with each of his insightful reports. I can't afford to follow the team up and down the country - but do attend most home matches - so having Kevin's reports really helps me get an independent take on how the Addicks are doing. And what a start to the season we're having!

SUMMER UNI WIN

As a mum with two children, I was delighted to learn about the courses available for youngsters through Greenwich Summer Uni. Instead of hanging around the streets or their mates' homes on their summer holiday, my daughters tried something different and made new friends. Now they've both gone back to school with a new-found enthusiasm for all that's on offer there. Thank you Summer Uni. M Spencer, Lee

Chantelle and Elaine flourish in council apprenticeships

CHANTELLE Brown's mother is disabled and her father is her mother's carer, so they're both very proud of the young breadwinner who's flying through a Greenwich Council apprenticeship.

The personable 20-year-old is a finance apprentice in children's services based at Riverside House West in Woolwich.

She told GT: "A lady in the Connexions office at Kidbrooke School told me about this job. I went for it, going through the whole test and interview process - and got it!"

"I went to the Post-16 college at Kidbrooke and came straight here two years ago. I didn't plan to go university because of my commitments at home."

Chantelle (far right) left Kidbrooke with two double A-levels and 10 GCSEs. She said: "It was a great school because they knew what I was capable of and pushed me, not allowing me to sit back. I'm glad I went straight into work. There's no guarantee of a job after university. When you go into an apprenticeship they give you all the skills you need, including going to college for qualifications, and you get experience as well."

HELPFUL ENVIRONMENT: Elaine gets a little tuition from a colleague

She was also made very welcome at the council. "All the people I work with are really nice and understanding. If I make a mistake they don't make a fuss, they just help me," said Chantelle, who is in the second year of her AAT (Association of Accounting Technicians) course at Greenwich Community College.

"It's brilliant to work for the local council. I wouldn't want to wake up early to go into central London. Here I'm getting a decent wage for my age and all my friends are asking about jobs in the council now!"

ELAINE Maunsell has completed her council apprenticeship in admin and now works for adult and older people's services in Riverside House East in Woolwich.

She was working part-time in Sainsbury's and in a pub when she saw the advert on the Greenwich Council website. Elaine, 21, who lives in Eltham, told GT: "It's gone really well. All the people here are really welcoming. I live locally so it's very easy to get here, rather than going up to London."

Elaine went to St Thomas More secondary school in Eltham, where she gained nine GCSEs. "University never really appealed to me," she said. "I've seen a lot of my older friends go there but struggle to get jobs because they haven't got the experience. I've got two years' experience under my belt and I think it gives you a lot of confidence. Everyone here helps each other, so the atmosphere is great. I've got my three

'mummies' who take care of me and Nerissa, who did her apprenticeship just before me."

Elaine was born in Ireland and came to London at the age of three. "I don't really think about credit crunch or things like that, but the pay is good and I've got three more A-levels since being here," she said. "Opportunities for promotion are great."

Choosing to earn and learn

CHANTELLE Brown and Elaine Maunsell reckon their best decision in recent years has been to get a Greenwich Council apprenticeship.

Greenwich has signed up to a London councils' pledge to offer a further 60 apprenticeships over the next four years, and if Chantelle and Elaine are anything to go by, it's a scheme that's bound to take off.

Deputy council leader Peter Brooks, who is also the cabinet member for regeneration and human resources, said: "Greenwich Council's successful apprenticeship scheme was established in 1998 and since then has offered over 80 young residents the chance to 'earn and learn' across a wide range of jobs."

"It's vital to the future prosperity of our borough that we attract more local young people into council jobs."

WIN! WIN! WIN! WIN!

GT reader Frank McHugh has taken this terrific photo - he calls it 'Barrier-Arena-Wharf' - and our lucky competition winner will get a framed copy.

All you have to do is answer this simple question: When was the Thames Barrier completed:

- A 1962
- B 1982
- C 2002

Send your answers to: Barrier Competition, GT Communications, Woolwich Town Hall, Wellington Street, SE18 6PW, by Friday, September 25. The first correct answer pulled out of the hat will be the winner.

Frank told GT: "As a young man I was keen on photography. I had a Pentax K1000 SLR, not the best camera you could get but a serious bit of kit.

"It unfortunately got stolen and by then I was a dad with a baby boy. Photography took a back seat so I never replaced it with a camera of equal quality, resulting in a loss of enthusiasm.

"I was a snapper, not a photographer. Six months ago I decided to get a decent camera again and attempt to reignite my enthusiasm.

"I bought a Nikon D60 Digital SLR, and on a trip to the Thames Barrier I saw this scene and I thought it would make a good picture. I went back several times and this is what I got. I have a blown-up version hanging in pride of place at home."

HISTORY TALK CRIES WOLFE

SCHOOL DAYS and early years of General James Wolfe are the subject of a Saturday afternoon lecture at Greenwich Heritage Centre on September 26. The General, whose statue looks out over Greenwich from the top of the park, was killed, aged 32, in September, 1759 - 250 years ago. He died at the battle of the Plains of Abraham, during which the French were beaten and British rule in Canada was established. James Wolfe spent part of his childhood in Greenwich, and the house where he lived in Croom's Hill is still there. He is buried in the family vault at St Alfege parish church, Greenwich town centre, alongside his father. Everyone is welcome at the lecture, given by Frances Ward, which starts at 2pm. Club of instant fellowship

BEING a publican, you meet all sorts...

Keith Tuckley got chatting to the Rotary Club of Woolwich when they used The Earl of Chatham for a function.

Shortly after, Keith decided to take time out from his busy hostelry in Thomas Street to join up - and, three years on, as from this July, he's their President!

"I'd heard of 'Rotary' but didn't know much about it," said the father-of-three who is celebrating 30 years in the licensed trade in 2009.

"What really attracted me is how far-reaching it is in the work it does. Also, you can walk into any Rotary club in the world and sit down and it's instant fellowship."

Service Above Self is the Rotarians' motto and there are 1,840 clubs across Great Britain and Ireland. That adds up to over 55,000 members in the UK altogether, and more recruits are always welcome at the Woolwich branch.

Keith told GT: "We meet at twilight - 6.30pm for 7pm - on Mondays at Charlton Athletic FC and share a meal. All we look for are responsible, caring people who want to 'put something back' into the community."

Me & my borough

by Pat Greenwood

Northampton-born Keith, who ran the old King's Head in the Holloway Road before moving to the Chatham in 1985, has nominated his president's charities as Demelza children's hospice, along with the Charlton Park youth club attached to the special school and the Riding for the Disabled organisation next door.

We couldn't persuade Keith into his chain-of-office for the photo. He's a man of action, rather than regalia!

All we look for is responsible, caring people who want to put something back into the community

Look out for him and some of his fellow Rotarians shaking their collecting tins in the ticket-hall at North Greenwich tube before the Cliff Richard concert at The O₂ on Friday, September 25.

"We should be in fancy dress. Beach-barbecue style, or something like it, to tie in with the Cliff-theme," said Keith.

They also plan to hold their usual fund-raising dinner for members at Devonport House in Greenwich town centre in January, to which neighbouring Rotary clubs are always invited. FIND out more about joining the Rotary Club of Woolwich by contacting secretary Roger Geeson on 020-8300 3609 or membership secretary Nila Khan on 020-8854 3087.

You can also ring Keith at the Earl of Chatham on 020-8317 9513. If you go in for a drink, don't forget to drop your spare change in his Rotary collecting tin!

• Since 1985, Rotarians everywhere have been dedicated to helping to eradicate polio from the world. Almost a quarter of a century on, cases have fallen from 350,000 a year to around 1,000, and two billion children have been protected from the disease. Estate welcomes mounted police patrols

POLICE have been high-profile in and around Woolwich's Connaught Estate, off Brookhill Road, for over five weeks to disrupt drug dealing, prevent youth violence and deal with anti social behaviour.

The intelligence-led exercise, Operation Perth, has resulted in three arrests so far for supplying cannabis, for possession of class A drugs, and for affray, theft and possession of an offensive weapon. Operation Perth will continue during this month.

Officers from Greenwich together with the Woolwich Common Safer Neighbourhoods

by Pat Greenwood

team and officers from the mounted branch have been patrolling hot spot areas, conducting stop and searches and providing reassurance to the local community.

The teams are on duty every day; and twice a week they do 24-hour patrols.

A total of 120 stop and searches have been carried out since the start of the operation.

Officers taking part in the operation have also been attending residents' groups, including the 'Voice of the Community' (Connaught Tenants' Association) meeting in Hewett House on the estate on September 2, to reassure the community and provide updates on the operation.

Insp Dave Slade, who is in charge of operation Perth, said: "Our main priorities are to disrupt drug dealing, reduce the fear of crime and reassure the local community that we are doing all that we can to address their concerns."

He added: "We have been concentrating our efforts on specific areas identified via our intelligence process.

"Residents have welcomed our presence and the work that we are doing."

MEET THE NEIGHBOURS: residents greet one of the mounted police patrols

New cafe for park approved

A POPULAR park has received a second major cash injection for improvements in little under a year.

A new cafe is set to open next year at Avery Hill Park, Eltham, after Greenwich Council approved a £300,000 building scheme.

The money will help to fund a new cafe and toilets as well as a new power supply for the park and the improvements should be in place by Easter next year.

The work will also be part-funded by the insurance claim from the destruction of the previous cafe in an arson attack in 2006, as well as from the sale of the West Lodge building in Avery Hill.

Subject to statutory consents, the new cafe will be sited close to the location of the original cafe close to the recently upgraded sports changing rooms, the Grade II listed Winter Gardens, the recently improved play area and the visitor car park.

The positive news follows a successful campaign last year, which netted £400,000 from the Mayor of London's Priority Parks Programme.

Councillor John Fahy, cabinet member for culture and Olympics, said: "This is great news for what is undoubtedly one of the borough's most popular parks. The work is part of the council's commitment to improving sporting and leisure facilities in the run-up to London 2012."

£4.5m bid for new homes

LARGE three, four and five bedroom family homes could be built if Greenwich Council wins a bid for £4.5m to fund them. The government's Homes and Communities Agency is due to announce its funding decision later this month. If successful the council plans to build eight homes on small sites on existing council estates across the borough. There would be extensive consultation with council tenants on the planning and development process for each site.

The homes would be built by a private developer who is required to ensure jobs and training opportunities are available to local people.

Nature's beauty and dangers

WITH the Labor Day Bank Holiday and the 'unofficial' days of Summer behind us, here in Greenwich, USA, everyone is back to work and back to school – all ready for a burst of productivity which goes on here between mid September and the Thanksgiving holidays in November. With people away on vacation and schools temporarily closed, there has been a suppression of the Swine Flu Virus, which we have been warned by our local health advisor, could return with a vengeance as everyone 'returns' and the seasons change. Not only are we worried about Swine Flu, but we have the added concern of the ongoing problems with Lyme disease and the West Nile Virus! In North Connecticut there is a town call Lyme, where the Lyme disease was first identified in 1975. There seems to be no known cure for Lyme disease and even the doctors are rather fuzzy about how severe it can be. Lyme disease is transferred to humans and pets from deer ticks, which like to live in the long grass or in piles of leaves. Here in Greenwich we have a number of deers in the neighbourhood - one of which likes to eat the tops of flowers in our front garden, so danger is rather close to home! Not all ticks carry the bacteria that causes Lyme disease and the local town hall has a tick checking facility where you can take your captured tick along to be tested for the virus. Symptoms of Lyme disease include a 'bull's-eye' rash within 7-14 days in addition to muscle aches, joint pain, fatigue and fever. If left untreated, intermittent episodes of increased joint pain and arthritis can develop with late disease stage incurring neurological symptoms such as memory loss or 'brain fog.' Fear not – the deers in Greenwich Park SE10 don't carry this disease! The West Nile virus is transmitted via mosquito bite to both humans and animals. The mosquitoes thrive in stagnant water in warm conditions. Here, the town hall is active in educating residents to keep all water catch basins drained, cut grass short, avoid activities outdoors during dusk and dawn and use bug nets. The bite from an infected mosquito can affect the central nervous system with more common symptoms being slight fever, headache, rash, nausea and eye pain. Greenwich has beautiful lush green landscapes, fields and parklands – but as an urban Brit, I'm terrified of any of us catching such diseases so we don't venture out as much as we would like. We take our dog Archie to the more manicured parks that get mowed regularly, stay away from the hiking outboud trails and take advantage of the grassless beaches too. Poor little Austin, who is now three months old, has a mosquito net attached to his car-seat and stroller! Wherever we live, it's about having respect for nature and being aware of the dangers as well as the beauty it has to offer – and taking responsibility to educate ourselves and learn what to do if and when we are affected.

NATURE LOVER: Beverley admires the coastline of Greenwich, Connecticut

RIVERSIDE CLEAN UP

A 'flash mob' clean-up of the Thames managed to fill a whole barge with litter. Volunteers from all over the capital spent four days at the end of last month clearing up the riverside – in Woolwich, the Isle of Dogs and in Fulham. The event was co-ordinated by the environmental charity Thames 21 as part of the 'Cleaner Thames Challenge 2009'. On Day Three, the 'flash mob' descended on the foreshore at New Ferry Approach at the end of Venus Road on the Woolwich Dockyard estate. Thames 21 said: "The aim of the four days was to help make a cleaner, greener River Thames foreshore and remove as much litter as possible that affect these visible areas. "Volunteers helped to remove plastic bags, shopping trolleys, food wrappers, bicycles and all manner of other litter that end up in rivers. Those volunteering had the rare chance to get onto the foreshore, meet like-minded people and get a new perspective on London's waterways." • FIND out about future volunteering opportunities at www.thames21.org.uk and click on 'calendar of events'.

28 buildings open for celebration of architecture

TWENTY-EIGHT of the borough's most iconic buildings open their doors to the public for a celebration of architecture and design this weekend, September 19 and 20.

It's the 17th year of the annual Open House weekend – the capital's architectural showcase which celebrates design excellence.

More than 700 buildings of every ages and type open their doors to the public for free.

In Greenwich it's a chance to have a look behind the facades of local landmark buildings and as they open their eyes and minds to the concepts of good design.

Architype, the designers of Brookhill Children's Centre are leading guided tours of the community venue in Brookhill Road, Woolwich, between 11am and 4pm on both days. The centre is also running fruit tree-planting ceremonies and there'll be free activities including a cookery demonstration and the launch of a new eco-schools design project.

TOP TOWER: tours of Grade II listed Severndroog Castle take place from 10am-3pm both days

Over at Charlton House, artists Emily Jost and Lucy Williams exhibit their work inspired by the capital's only surviving Jacobean mansion in the Long Gallery on the Sunday from 10am to 4pm.

Greenwich Magistrates' Court is celebrating its 100th anniversary by running behind-the-scenes tours from 9.30am to 4pm on Saturday. The imposing Grade II listed building is opening the court rooms and cells and there are historical and modern day mock trials along with displays of police vehicles and dog handling.

Greenwich MP and Open House trustee Nick Raynsford, said: "Open House has performed an exceptional service over the past 17 years in raising the profile of London buildings and public spaces, and raising awareness of their value. London's rich urban geography is not static, but is changing all the time as the transformation of Canary Wharf, the Greenwich Peninsula and now the Olympic Park demonstrates so clearly."

Double success for police team

Drugs and weapons found

POLICE have recovered drugs and homemade weapons after searching a Woolwich estate.

Cannabis, cocaine, heroin and knives were among the haul retrieved from the Barnfield Estate early on Friday, September 4.

The search by Shooters Hill Safer Neighbourhoods team, patrol officers and Intelligence officers followed reports that foyers and locked utility cupboards on the estate had been filled with drugs and weapons. Sergeant Dan Rouse from Greenwich Borough Intelligence Unit said: "We conducted a thorough search of the estate and recovered several items."

"We have certainly disrupted the plans of those who were thinking of selling on drugs and weapons. We would like to reassure anyone who lives within the estate or around the area that the police and council are working closely to make the area safer."

Six men were arrested by members of the Shooters Hill Safer Neighbourhoods team following an intelligence-led operation to tackle burglaries in the area.

During Operation Lawrence Kirk, which started last month, two men were arrested for going equipped; they were carrying a bag of over 40 tools which all appeared to have been modified in order to break into cars and homes.

A third man was arrested for driving a stolen pushbike and was also in breach of his curfew whilst another man was caught acting suspiciously and arrested after a short car chase.

Two further individuals were arrested for driving a suspected stolen vehicle, possession of offensive weapons and driving without a licence or insurance.

Police Sergeant Barry Edge from Shooters Hill Safer Neighbourhoods team, was in charge of the operation.

He said: "I am pleased with the initial results of this ongoing operation as I believe that we disrupted criminals in action. "We have recently noticed an increase in burglary in the area and we have responded not only to intelligence, but have also listened to the concern expressed by our community and acted upon it."

He added: "We would like to ask residents to help us to keep crime down and ensure that their front and back doors are locked correctly, particularly those who have UPVC doors. House and car keys should be kept in a safe place, easy to reach in case of emergency, but possibly not close to front doors or windows."

Stallholders stage showcase

GREENWICH market traders and their friends have raised £2,475 in a marathon fundraising event for charity. Vic Irvin, from 'The Old Print Works' stall on the Arts and Crafts Market, joined forces once again with his colleague Louise Hatch from 'Shine' jewellery to organise their third – and biggest – fun day under the glass canopy on August 30. Cash raised will be split equally between the Childline charity and Charlton School in Charlton Park Road where Louise is friends with literacy advisor Annette Riddle. Louise explained: "Annette had set up an information display about Charlton School and Childline gave us collecting tins and t-shirts. There was a succession of live music and local acts on a sound-stage and at 3pm my friends Kate Jaconello, Emma Edwards, Julie Ruck and I formed up into 'Old Birds Allowed,' just for the occasion with some of the others." The event included a funfair and stocks, as well as face-painting by Daisy Idwal-Jones, tu-tu making by 'The Studio' and jewellery-making with 'Beadoir'. "After we'd cleared our stalls, John Kiely, the manager at the Coach and Horses pub next door, helped us host an evening auction where traders donated a range of wonderful merchandise," Louise, who has been on the market for seven years, told GT: "A big 'thank you' to everyone who supported us. So many people gave so much of their time and energy. The day really brought out the community spirit on Greenwich market – and, on that Sunday, it was certainly a great place to be!"

SONG AND DANCE: the month features art forms from all corners of the earth

Fairtrade fashion show

- A chance to sing gospel with the London Community Gospel Choir, and
- 'Call Mr Robeson' – a play chronicling the life of Paul Robeson at Greenwich Theatre. Audiences can also enjoy dance courses and performances, history talks, lectures and exhibitions, story-telling, book readings, crafts and musical events covering jazz, hip hop, gospel and beat boxing. The event is part of CREATE – Greenwich Council's 2012 cultural festival of art and sport which runs each summer in the run up to the London Olympic games.

Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for culture and the Olympics, said: "This year's programme presents a wonderful opportunity for everyone to discover and share the amazing creative cultural mix that makes Greenwich such a unique and exciting borough in which to work, live and visit."

"Celebrating the borough's diversity sits at the heart of Greenwich's role as a 2012 host borough and Greenwich's CREATE and it provides the chance for you to take part and enjoy a wide range of artistic and creative performances, exhibitions, lectures and workshops in venues across the borough."

IN the first four days of September, 1939, the biggest and most concentrated mass evacuation in the country was called an 'evacuee'. Were YOU a child in this borough, evacuated? What did you feel? Please write to us at GT Communications, Woolwich Town Hall, Weir Road, SE18 6PP. PAT GREENWOOD attended a special Wartime Evacuees' Day, held at the Fire Station.

A big adventure or a nightmare?

'I must have been aged about nine when I was first evacuated to Paddock Wood in Kent. We could have walked there!'

WAS it a welcome adventure and an escape from the grime and poverty of London? Or was it a frightening and heartbreaking wrench from your parents and all your friends?

Scores of over-70s spent the first Saturday of this month laughing, crying, and sharing their experiences and their memorabilia.

Sisters-in-law Vera Mullender, originally Crabb, and Pamela Diplock, formerly Colmer, who now live in the same road in Shooters Hill, each had bitter-sweet experiences.

Vera, who later worked at the Co-op on Plumstead Common, told GT: "I enjoy telling people I was born at 10 DOWN Street - not the other one! - just outside these Arsenal gates.

"I must have been aged about nine when I was first evacuated to Paddock Wood in Kent. We could have walked there!

"We were living in Voce Road, Plumstead. It was 1939 and the bombs hadn't quite started.

"I went with my step-brother - who is now Pamela's husband - a sister and a couple of neighbours. We were only there about three weeks.

"The second time, it was Bridgewater in Somerset.

"We were there a couple of months that time and I remember the people were very elderly.

"I also remember the river running through the town and a great big statue of William Blake. Every time I hear one of his poems, I think of those days.

"Then, in 1944, when the 'doodle-bugs' started, my mate, Jean Wright's mum, took me up to Blackpool with them. I've been friends with Jean for 67 years, she's on holiday in Australia at the moment, and I can remember all the big hotels turned into hospitals for the wounded people in Blackpool and me being chosen as a child from London to pick the winning raffle ticket at one of the fund-raising do's for them."

Pamela, who later worked in the Electricity Board in Powis Street, started her life at 51 Tuam Road, Plumstead.

She said: "I was born in April, 1940, at the British Hospital for Mothers and Babies in Woolwich. Dad worked in the Arsenal as a fitter/turner/engineer.

"One night he changed shifts with someone. The machine shop was bombed. He could have been in there. They moved him and his colleagues to near Worcester, and mum and I went to Torquay.

"But I heard later that where we were staying wasn't very nice. There were mice running around my face in the cot.

"So my mum and some others got moved to Worcester, and we ended up living as a family again in a 10-acre fruit farm owned by Mr and Mrs Cook.

"We came back to London in 1945."

Retired MOD civil servant Brian Hookins, who was awarded the MBE for services to the Royal Navy in 2006, remembers being evacuated out of West Ham, also to Worcester, in 1940 at the age of five.

Brian, now living in Lee, told GT: "I can't remember much about it, except that I got separated from my older brother. It was a big house with loads of kids and it wasn't very nice. A load of us in one bed!

"My dad came for us both.

"Then, at the beginning of 1941, we were in our Anderson shelter when we saw the massive orange balls of fire coming out of the Tate and Lyle factory. It was the sugar burning. Later, our whole road went.

"My mum, my gran and other neighbours and their kids were all evacuated to a village near Leicester, and we got a two-up-two-down council house there."

Later, Brian's dad managed to get his family a requisitioned house at 66 Coldbath Street on the Greenwich/Lewisham borders. Brian went to Blackheath Road junior school nearby, and did a lot of his lessons in the school basement during the bombing. Later, they moved to Charlton.

FRIGHTENING: former evacuee Brian Hookins got temporarily separated from his older brother at the age of five, while (below) the next generation is learning about World War 2

Lily, aged two, joined a whole group of former pupils and parents of Pound Park Nursery, Charlton, to complete a fact-finding mission to the even make some paper 'gas-mask' Yael, aged 10, now a student at Millennium Primary School, Greenwich, was there with mum Deborah. She said: "We've done a bit at school. Mum has told me lots about the V. I think that being evacuated must have been very sad, because you were away from your family and that didn't really know exactly where you were going."

BETWEEN
September 1 and 3, 1939, officials evacuated over 1.5 million women and children from 'danger zones' in London alone.
Firepower's education officer Bob Lindridge, worked closely with Pat and Tony Fawcett and other local members of ERA, the Evacuees Reunion Association, to organise the special day.

Operation Pied Piper began. In buses

Greenwich Council's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 152

How the lettings policy works

Housing applicants are placed within 'Bands' according to the Council's policy for letting homes. Your band information is on the letter that the Council sent you when you registered, or when your circumstances changed.

Property adverts say which band can apply and any other criteria. When all the bids are received, the property is then offered to:

For properties advertised for band A and band B - the applicant who has had this priority status for the longest time.
For properties advertised for band C applicants - the applicant who has been registered on the Council's list for the longest time.

Band

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the council must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

1 Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme. If you're not, get an application form by phoning the Access and Allocations Section on 020 8921 2941. Or pick up a form from any neighbourhood office.

2 Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Council about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

3 Pick out your ideal property

by looking in Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website:

www.greenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free in either your neighbourhood housing office, library or UK Online centre.

4 Apply in one of two ways

- Phone the 24-hour hotline 020 8921 4340. It's an automatic push-button system and calls will be charged at the normal local rate, or
- Via the Council's website

Local rapper's new single verdict - p24

Too hot to Handel

Classical music lovers Bach-ing up the right tree on an evening of Paganini, pizza and Pinot Grigio

by Rod Kitson

IF you thought Paganini was a toasted sandwich it's time to eat your words. If you thought Bach was what dogs chew off trees, you need a classical education. Handel will not open the doors of your medicine cabinet - he'll open your mind. This weekend, a pair of top classical musicians are gracing the borough with their serene interpretations of the masters' works. Cellist Carina Albuquerque and violinist Emanuel Salvador team up for the recital at St. Thomas's Church, Charlton, on September 20. The duo will be playing all the hits by the aforementioned Joseph Bach, Handel, Paganini, and more besides, in a show that starts at 4pm at the church on Woodland Terrace. Organiser Elena Brytan - a Ukrainian who has made Greenwich her home - told Scene: "It's amazing to have such fantastic musicians playing at one of my shows. And it is such a close encounter between the audience and the players, not like in the bigger venues where you are so far away." Elena's passion for music started her organising recitals for a pianist friend who was "being exploited by promoters. So I would put on a show for her and pay her," she said. In two 40-minute slots, the virtuosos at Sunday's performance will play a solo piece and a duet together either side of the interval. Elena enthused: "They are highly skilled musicians who dedicate their lives to music. Since the age of six they have played all the time - it's their life." But the stars aren't too aloof to talk to the crowd - another benefit of the intimate surroundings. "You can even chat to them afterwards," Elena added. And if all the talk of Paganinis is making you hungry, next stop: the interval! Thrown into the bargain is a tasty pizza/wine supper combo as well as an art exhibition showcasing all the best in local talent. "Trevor Root is showing his work. He's from Bexleyheath and does portraits and landscapes that are absolutely amazing," the promoter said. "I'm baking the pizzas myself and adding some extra toppings - I'm a vegetarian so roasted vegetables are my favourite!" But get it while it's hot folks - those classical music fans are notorious gannets. "I have done the concerts many times - and there is never any pizza left!" Elena joked.

*The recital is at St. Thomas's Church, Woodland Terrace, Charlton.
Starts at 4pm on Sunday September 20.
Tickets are £8.50 in advance or on the door.

Behind the scenes

There's always something to make you aim even higher

THIS week I was invited to an event which served to remind me that, no matter how much work we present at the theatre, no matter how many youth projects we put together or how many writers or theatre companies we support, we should never lose sight of our place in the wider arts sector. However high we reach, there is always so much which can still excite and inspire us to aim ever higher - often right on our doorstep. At Greenwich Dance Agency, director Brendan Keaney and choreographer Rosemary Lee came together to offer a sneak preview of some of the work planned for 2009 and beyond. Key among the announcements was the Big Dance in 2010 and 2012, a biennial pan-London celebration of dance with nine days of dance events in unusual places throughout the city.

"The aim of the Big Dance" Brendan told us, "is one of the keynote projects in the run-up to the Olympic & Paralympic Games in 2012, and aims to demonstrate the power of dance to engage all people of all ages, cultural backgrounds and abilities. gDA is delighted to have been chosen as one of the five hubs which will co-ordinate activity across the capital, with our focus being on Greenwich, Lewisham, Bexley and Bromley." However, not content to wait for the Big Dance next year, gDA has commissioned Common Dance, a new large-scale work from leading British choreographer Rosemary Lee - set to be a highlight of this year's Dance Umbrella festival. For the work, Lee will transform the Borough Hall into "common ground" inhabited by a company of 52 performers (44 of whom are members of the public from Greenwich and across London) aged from 8 to 82. Invited to sneak in at the back of a rehearsal, it was captivating to watch the community dancers working with the professionals, and it didn't take long before it became hard to distinguish between the two. Brendan emphasised that the public perception of dance has developed significantly over recent years. "For those of us who have been working in the sector for some time" he said, "there is now a real sense that it is not just those of us in the dance world who understand the value of dance. This is not just an exciting moment for gDA, it is a great moment for dance." On the evidence of the ambition and scale of the Big Dance, and the inspirational sneak preview we were granted, there's no doubt he is right.

Born for music

Local musician/rapper/mogul/producer Born 2 B has been in the industry since the early 90s. His new release is mature and reflective toasting on the local soundsystems of the late 1980s. Signed to a management deal at just 18-years-old, Born 2 B, aka Colin Crook, had his first release in 1991.

RAPPER Born 2 B grew up in Woolwich and cut his teeth

Nearly two decades on and the local-boy-come-good is the director of his own label, producer, mentor - and still finds time to record and release his own records. Latest single is the double A-side, 2 Live Another Day/U Don't Know, which is out on physical release (in store, not download) on October 15. The commercially stronger first side, 2 Live Another Day uses a sample from 80s Ska legends Madness's 'Grey Day', set against Born 2 B's undeniably British tales of thug life.

"The message behind the song is to show youngsters that the image that rap music gives off is not right," he said. "That lifestyle is not something to strive for - the people who are in that life want to get out of it." A tapestry of madcap, hard-nut characters make up the thread of the song, and although fictional, 38-year-old Crook admits that a few were "inspired by real people". And the Madness bassline cribbed has never been sampled before. "I grew up with that music," said the rapper, "and youngsters need to hear it!"

Lush reggae production fills out the sparse live instrumentation before the chorus hits home: 'Don't you realise your mistake? There's too much give and not enough take/The thought of leaving's a real headache, Should I stay or should I get away?'

It's an evocative portrait of the seedier side of London, and a great antidote to American glorification of life on the lam.

"UK rappers are often inspired by American artists," B2B added, "but I wanted to give them something that sounded completely British." Harder sounding flip of the double sided single, U Don't Know, tells of 'Bent cops, bent villains doing deals', political corruption and greed. And like 2LAD, U Don't Know deals with the perils of street life:

'Too many fake Dons on the street, and they can't take the heat, get the youth on his feet/Don wants a dollar but he can't do the time, get the youth into crime, get all you on the front line.'

It is rap with a conscience, and the progressive ideas of a mind concerned with consequence, living in the future as well as the now.

Francophile DVD

'Girl Cut in Two' cut to pieces

MANY'S the French film I've seen where young women are infatuated with older men - and I suppose it's something we just have to put up with. I remember being in Paris with the lads many years ago for a European Cup match - not the most sophisticated of assignments, granted - and running into an older French guy (his name was Guy) in a bar with an Isabelle Adjani lookalike on his arm. He was a middle-aged cross somewhere between Spongebob and Squidwood yet, try as we did, we comparative youngsters couldn't begin to compete with the jacket over both shoulders and the Gauloise smoked at a raffish angle. Veteran film maker Claude Chabrol's The Girl Cut in Two is about similar smoothie, author Charles Saint-Denis (Francois Berleand), urbane to a fault, who has a wonderful (and very attractive) wife whom he says he can't live without, and a wonderful (and very attractive) agent whom he treats quite properly as a sister.

The silly boy still makes a beeline for sparky young TV weathergirl Gabrielle (Ludivine Sagnier). Here the plot thinnens. Will ageing Charlie give up his wonderful wife and his wonderful home (not to mention his wonderful agent) for a fluffy cloud of a female? Of course not. He says he's going away for a few days but goes for a few weeks, leaving rebuffed Fluffy to marry poor little rich boy Paul Gaudens (Benoît Magimel) who also falls for gullible Gabrielle, who by this time has progressed to fronting an inane chat show, 'The Icing on the Cake'.

This relationship all goes Pete Tong as well, and later on a gun goes off, but I was well past caring by then. I note that Chabrol himself was 79 in June. Maybe he was trying to impress some poor young fan on the block.

A meaningless film about a randy old rascal and a silly young feckless thing. Who needs it? Try and find 'One Deadly Summer' with the intoxicating Adjani. Classier fare altogether.

Adventureland of the free

LET'S face it, that was summer. Done. 'Round about now, kids of all shapes and sizes are getting on with their lives. New lives, in colleges, new forms, maybe - a big maybe - new jobs. This would be a great time for you lot to see Adventureland. It follows the fate of a spoiled American kid who is just laying back and waiting for his glorious future to unfold - a fancy trip around Europe, a journalism degree and a great job in 'Noo Yark'. Sadly for him, reality strikes when his dad gets canned from work so his American Dream goes pop, and he winds up as a gopher in a dismal American adventure park. This is a semi-autobiographical film from writer/director Greg Mottola (Superbad) and is another great American coming-of-age movie. But it is better than most and has a lot to say about real values and friendship that are useful lessons to learn. This is kind of a strange genre where guys in their 50s reminisce about their youth to 80s rock tracks for kids of today, but, like Ferris Beuler's day off, it seems to work and Adventureland is a warm and entertaining film.

'Kins' the master of all trades

Addicks' coach still earns fans' special affection

by Kevin Nolan

AFTER joining Charlton from Colchester United in September, 1996, following a tortuous transfer saga involving bitter rivals Gillingham, Irish midfield dynamo Mark Kinsella packed in 226 games (plus 11 substitute appearances) before bowing out in a 2-2 draw with Sunderland on April 27, 2002.

The statistics show that the sturdy (5ft 9ins, 11st 8lbs) Dubliner's Valley career was relatively short but also undeniably sweet.

Under his galvanic captaincy, the Addicks were twice promoted to the Premiership, made a winning contribution in May, 1998, to one of the best games ever played at Wembley ("that play-off final against Sunderland was probably the highlight of my playing days although the 4-2 win at Highbury ran it close") and won the First Division championship in a history-making 1999-2000 season, during which they established a club record of 12 consecutive league victories.

Born in Glasnevin, Dublin, on August 12, 1972, Mark Anthony James Kinsella began his sporting life in junior hurling as a centre midfielder with Whitehall Colmcilles. "You learned how to take care of yourself on a hurling pitch," recalls the deceptively tough competitor.

Part of a Gaelic-sports playing family (his dad played senior hurling for Dublin), he took naturally to soccer and joined legendary Home Farm FC as a nine-year old. Unproductive trials with Manchester United and Spurs persuaded him to lower his sights to Colchester, where he signed full-time professional forms on August 18, 1989.

A roller-coaster stint with the U's included relegation from the Football League into the Conference in 1989-90, ever-presence in the side which won back its League status as 1991-92 Conference champions and an FA Trophy winners medal. While at Layer Road, Kinsella represented Ireland at every level from U-15 to U-21 and clearly needed a bigger stage on which to parade his burgeoning talents.

Kinsella was one of those priceless players trusted implicitly to 'do the right thing'

It was at Charlton that "Kins" came imperiously into his own. Signed for a bargain-basement fee of £150,000 and shrewdly appointed skipper by Alan Curbishley, he made his debut against Oldham Athletic on September 28, 1996, claimed the first of 23 goals against Oxford United two months later, then racked up 38 league and Cup appearances in an otherwise inauspicious season. He was an instant hit with fans who twice voted him their Player of the Year and still regard him with special affection.

The momentous 1997-98 campaign saw Charlton led by their ever-present captain through the Division One Play-off semi-finals via two 1-0 victories over Ipswich, then on to Wembley where Sunderland were vanquished on penalties, one of them nervelessly converted by the skipper.

An instant reality check was provided by relegation in their first Premiership experience but that was put right immediately when a second promotion and the First Division title were secured in a 1-1 draw at Blackburn on Easter Monday, 2000. The Addicks were back for seven eventful years.

Officially a central midfielder, Kinsella was one of those priceless players trusted implicitly by his manager to "do the right thing" by their team in any situation. Charlton supporters were rarely surprised when he followed up an all-or-nothing tackle in the left back position with a powerfully accurate effort on goal from outside the opposition's penalty area moments later.

His all-purpose ability was rewarded by 48 Irish caps (three goals), including four games in the 2002 World Cup, where Roy Keane's self-indulgent walkout cleared the way for a player who would probably have walked over burning coals for the opportunity. "Roy did what he thought was right, I suppose, but it cleared the way for me to play for my country in the World Cup. That's a priceless memory. And we only went out on penalties to Spain."

Memorable long-range strikes at Bolton (1997) and Man Utd (1998) were punished by 4-1 thumpings, but a searing Cup equaliser past Shaka Hislop more or less persuaded a lachrymose Kevin Keegan to quit Newcastle United in January, 1997.

Knee injuries restricted Kinsella's appearances near the end of his Charlton career but the club realised a handsome profit on their initially modest investment when astutely selling him for more than £1,000,000 to Aston Villa in August, 2002.

Spells at WBA and Walsall, where a spell as caretaker player/manager brought him a belated Division Two championship medal, brought to an end an eventful playing career.

He returned to where he belongs at The Valley in December, 2006, and is now an integral part of the management team under Phil Parkinson, which is inspiring the Addicks to set the pace in League One.

The estimable Mark Kinsella could defend, attack, pass long or short, shoot fiercely and lead men. He was a Jack of all Trades. It's safe to say he mastered them all.

than Pardew's men deserved - but their lead didn't last long.

Four nervous minutes had elapsed in the second session when Shelvey took on Thomas near the left corner flag.

Finding his progress toward the byline blocked, he checked back on to his right foot, slipped momentarily but skilfully improvised a cross anyway. Goalkeeper Kelvin Davis and Lloyd Sam collided painfully in mid-air, leaving Deon Burton to nudge home his fourth goal of a personally fruitful campaign.

The Saints were in immediate trouble and grateful to the linesman who ruled out efforts by Burton and Shelvey with questionable offside flags, then dismayed most of a bumper crowd by failing to spot Sam being flagrantly manhandled inside the penalty area.

It was Charlton's turn to dominate and Kelly Youga's brilliant solo run ended with a low drive which unluckily clipped the outside of the left post.

It was also Pardew's turn to squirm, although in fairness, he maintained an impressive sang-froid throughout, applauding his admittedly lukewarm tormentors (this was, after all, The Valley, where dissent is restrained and civilised) as he left clutching his precious point. One flick of his imaginary moustache and he disappeared down the tunnel, to theatrical boos and hisses which had long since lost their sting. I mean, you feel a bit of a wally booing and hissing, don't you?

Former boss comes to The Valley to frustrate the table-topping Addicks

Charlton Athletic 1
Southampton 1

by Kevin Nolan

IT'S safe to say that Alan Pardew got under local skins when he returned to The Valley with Southampton on Saturday.

Short of turning up in a top hat and cape, while twirling an enormous false moustache, it's hard to see how he could have been more satisfyingly villainous. His popularity among Charlton fans knows all bounds.

Pardew's disastrous spell as the Addicks manager still rankles with supporters convinced that his heart was never in the job and just as sure that he regarded it as little more than an inconvenient detour on his journey to greater glory elsewhere.

Hell hath no fury like a football fan scorned. And that's just the blokes. You wouldn't want to be around a scorned female fan.

Pardew also brought with him a pervasive air of foreboding hardly in keeping with his struggling side's failure to whittle away any more than four of the 10-point penalty humiliatingly imposed on them before the season kicked off.

On paper, bottom-of-the-table Saints looked easy meat for their recently rampant hosts but everyone knows it doesn't work like that. Everyone knew this fixture was destined to blow up in Charlton's face. Everyone said so. Well, everyone was so nearly right.

Organised and solid, the South Coasters made it their business

DOWN BUT NOT OUT:
Charlton's Dean Burton scores during the Coca-Cola League One match at The Valley to frustrate their hosts by sticking to an energetic game plan designed to clog midfield and bring them down to their level.

Nothing wrong with that, of course, with the lively visitors putting the wind up the Addicks as early as the second minute after Joseph Mills was disconcertingly ruled onside

The league leaders were forced immediately on to the back foot and Dean Hammond's effort deflected to safety off Miguel Llera, who promptly betrayed Charlton's anxiety by clearing not only his lines but the roof of the East Stand in agricultural style. Jonjo Shelvey's wild shot deposited a second ball into the street as the Addicks desperately trod water.

Little was being seen of the slick passing which has lit up The Valley recently and it was instead Adam Lallana who spoiled a determined run by firing wide, before Elliot saved Lloyd James' 30-yard snapshot at full length.

Three minutes before the break, Southampton crowned their superiority by snatching a deserved lead, right back Wayne Thomas cutting inside to cross low for Lallana to nip in front of a sluggish Llera and turn the ball across Elliot into the opposite corner. It was no more
